Satyajit Das
Financial Crisis - Fairy Tale Endings?

The credit bubble is finally deflating. Excessive lending against over-optimistic asset valuations is the time honoured recipe for asset price bubbles. The early 2000s have been a period of “too much” and “too little” – too much liquidity, too much leverage, too much complex financial engineering, too little return for risk, too little understanding of the risk. In 2007, problems in the sub prime mortgage sector have quickly snowballed into a credit crisis of global dimensions. The current credit crunch is more than the bursting of a “bubble”. It is the crucible in which theories of the “new money” and the financial “jiggy pokery” (more politely known as financial engineering) of the structured credit markets, financial innovation and global money will be tested. George Soros recently observed: “The current crisis is the culmination of a super-boom that has lasted for more than 60 years”. Satyajit Das anticipated much of what is now unfolding. In Traders, Guns & Money: Knowns and Unknowns in the Dazzling World of Derivatives (2006, FT-Prentice Hall), he exposed the sophistry of derivatives and the structured credit market. He also highlighted the moral hazards and distorted incentive structures that posed major threats to market stability. In a 2006 speech – The Coming Credit Crash – Das argued that: “an informed analysis of the structured credit markets shows that risk is not better spread but more leveraged and largely by more concentrated amongst hedge funds and a small group of dealers. This does not improve the overall stability and security of the financial system but exposes it to increased risk of a “crash” during a credit downturn.” Das exposed the problems that are now becoming readily apparent.

Financial Crisis - Fairy Tale Endings focuses on the current financial crisis. It looks at what created the credit bubble, how financial engineering exacerbated it, what brought it to an end, how the bubble is unwinding and how banks, risk managers, regulators, corporate lawyers and auditors all played their part in creating it.

Biography
Satyajit Das works in the area of financial derivatives and risk management. He has worked on the ‘sell side’ (Commonwealth Bank, Citigroup, Merrill Lynch) and the ‘buy side’ (TNT). He is the author of Traders, Guns & Money: Knowns and Unknowns in the Dazzling World of Derivatives [2006, FT-Prentice Hall], an insider’s account of derivatives trading and the financial products business filled with black humour and satire. The book has been described by the Financial Times, London as “fascinating reading...explaining not only the high-minded theory behind the business and its various products but the sometimes sordid reality of the industry”. He is also the author [with Jade Novakov] of In Search of the Pangolin: The Accidental Eco-Tourist [2006, New Holland] Mr. Das holds Bachelors’ degrees in Commerce (Accounting, Finance and Systems) and Law from the University of New South Wales and a Masters degree in Business Administration from the Australian Graduate School of Management.
